How To Properly Field Dress a Big Game Animal and How to Cape Out Your Trophy

So you decide to go hunting but what do you do after you have harvested your animal? You know you want to save all of the meat and you have a trophy you want to mount for your home or office. You don't want to make a mistake, and now you don't have too. Here is the chance to learn from the pro's.

The Colorado Chapter of SCI is having this seminar on how to field dress any big game animal followed by how to cape out your trophy for the taxidermist at the picnic August 8.

Randy Kerchal from Randy's Custom Meats will instruct hunters on the proper method of taking care of your meat once you have pulled the trigger.

Keith Ratterree from Mount'n High Taxidermy will show you how to prepare your trophy so you can have it mounted to preserve your memories.

This FREE seminar is open to all SCI and RMR members and their guests. Directions are also on the RMR website at www.rmroosters.com. Please call the office to make reservations to attend. Call 719-635-3257 and we will put you on the list.

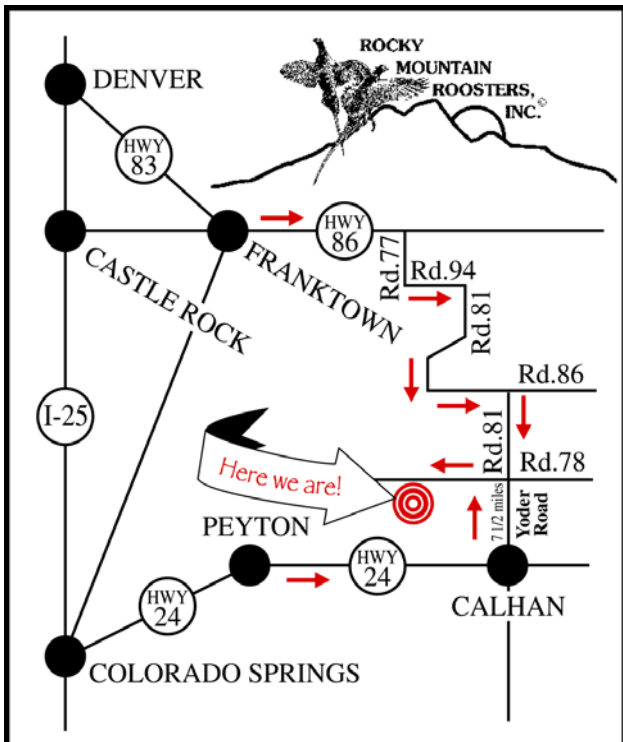

We will be collecting food for Springs Rescue Mission that day too. If you have game meat or non-perishable canned goods bring that with you and we will take it to the food bank. Any game meat or domestic meat is perfect for this group. SCI has collected thousands of pounds of meat in the past for this group and this goes a long way for those people who are in need.
